Australian Test opening batsman David Warner joined Randwick Petersham in 2013-14 from neighbouring club Eastern Suburbs. He debuted in round 2 against his old club effecting a run out and scoring eight runs. He was selected in the Australian squad for the 2013 Ashes Series in England but following a disciplinary hearing during the course of the ICC Champions Trophy, he was sent to South Africa to link with the Australia "A" team. After four innings there which included a massive 193, he returned to the UK to re-join the Ashes squad for the Third Test. In the final three Tests he scored 135 runs at an average of 22.50.

On his return to Australia he represented New South Wales in the limited-overs Ryobi Cup competition. After a slow start with just 21 from three innings, he scored back-to-back hundreds (139 and 138) before knocking up a record-breaking 197. He also scored 104 in the Sheffield Shield. But it was in the home Ashes series and the subsequent South African Test series where he excelled, scoring a total of 1,066 runs at an average of 71.06 including four centuries. In the Third and final Test against South Africa, it was David Warner at his attacking best. He scored 135 in the first innings followed by 145 in the second to take Man-of-the-Match honours. He also became the first batsman to pass 500 runs in a three Test series in South Africa. The previous best was by Jacques Kallis (498) and Adam Gilchrist (473).

David Warner was a member of Randwick Petersham during 2014-15 but owing to his first-class cricket commitments did not play a game with the club. His first-class cricket performances since he joined the club appear below:
